Vermont: application fees and identification

A landlord or agent may not charge a fee to apply for a residential rental. This application is free.

For background or credit checks, Vermont requires landlords to accept an unexpired government-issued ID (original or copy), an Individual Taxpayer Identification Number, or a Social Security number. A landlord may not insist on a Social Security number or reject an application because the applicant does not have one.

Keep identification numbers and documents out of this general application. If a lawful separate check needs identification, arrange a secure method with the provider.

Keep this notice with the application. Complete the form on the next two pages.
